

Undergraduate Final Project
Science of Law Study Program
Even Semester 2018/2019

ANALYSIS OF THE EFFECTIVENESS OF REGIONAL COMMISSION FOR OBSERVATION AND PROTECTION OF CHILDREN (KPPAD) OF RIAU ISLANDS PROVINCE

JESSICA
NPM: 1551145

Abstract

The problem of child cases are increasing from year to year in Indonesia and one of them is in the Riau Islands Province. This can occur because of various reasons. Even though this has become the responsibility of the State, the Government, and the community to ensure that children's rights can be fulfilled. Apart from the Regional Commission for Supervision and Protection of Children (KPPAD), the number of cases of children continue to increase every year. In this study, the writer conducted a study of the performance of the Regional Child Monitoring and Protection Commission (KPPAD) and the obstacles experienced by the Regional Child Monitoring and Protection Commission (KPPAD).

The writer uses the type of empirical research in which there are several stages, namely first conducting interviews as data needed for research and collecting other data, then the writer analyzes all the data that has been collected, and finally, the writer will draw conclusions from the analysis.

Based on the results of this study, it was obtained that the Regional Child Supervision and Protection Commission (KPPAD) still unable to carry out its duties as outlined in the Act, this could occur due to several obstacles experienced by the Regional Child Supervision and Protection Commission (KPPAD) originating from the community, government, and internal parties.

Keywords: Child, Regional Commission for Observation and Protection of Children (KPPAD), Riau Islands Province