Abstract

Every Childs in Indonesia basically has human rights, one of which is in undergoing an education review, as contained in the 1945 Constitution Article 31 paragraph (1). With this, the effectiveness of the Law and Child Protection Law can be one of the most important factors in fulfilling the rights to education for the street childrens. The main purpose of the author in raising the thesis research is to find out the rights of children owned by street childrens and their application in the City of Batam

The author uses a research method in the form of empirical juridical. The data used are primary data as a support in research and secondary data. Data collection is done by interviews and library research. After all the results have been collected, it will be compiled and analyzed by qualitative methods, which means compiling the data that has been obtained and arranged systematically. Furthermore, conclusions drawn from the results of the study are then described descriptively.

Based on the results of this study, the author can conclude that there is an asynchronous relationship between the 1945 Constitution and Law Number 20 of 2003 and Law Number 35 of 2014 as regulations governing the rights of childrens in obtaining education. When viewed from the perspective of the effectiveness of the Law and Child Protection Law has shown that the fulfillment of the rights of street children's education in the city of Batam is still not maximally fulfilled.
